

"Grandma, where are you going?" "My child, I have to leave you. This is our destiny: birth and death ! I am going to meet the Great Light!" "What is the Great Light?" "It is the kingdom of love!" "Can't you find it without going so far?" "Yes, my child, but I did not succeed and my time is over". "Shall I meet you again, grandma?" "Sure, my child!" "Where?" "In the kingdom of Love, my child!"

"Where is it?" "It is in your heart. Start your journey right now!" "How can I start, right now, grandma?" "Sit quietly. Close your eyes. Look and smile at your mind. Beyond your thoughts there is the kingdom of love!" The child closed his eyes and looked at his mind, he looked and smile at all his thoughts and he felt peace. Then he smiled at his grandmother, but she was no more there. "Grandma' – he cried – where are you?" He listened to a voice coming from his inner mind: "I told you, I am in your heart, in the kingdom of love!"

“Don’t you know who am I?” a mighty old man, proudly, asked the Lord of Death, Yamaraj.

“I am a holy, powerful Brahmin, I.P.S. official, BA, MBA, MSC, BSC, B com, Mcom, ISC, IA, Ph.D., M.B.B.S, great scholar, philosopher, writer, former Prime Minister, Banks owner, landlord ...”

“All of this is not of any use for your next destination. Here, in my references-book, I can see only few good actions that you have done and a long list of negative ones! This is what you are bringing with you as references for your new destination!” The mighty Brahmin was very enraged, “What is that shit book you have? Who made it?” “This is your mind. You have made it and this will send you in an unfortunate state of existence!” replied the Lord of Death

The selfish rat.

Once a mother rat gave a piece of Swiss Cheese to her two little sons. Swiss Cheese is famous because the blocks are riddled with holes known as "eyes". “Share it fraternally!” advised the mother. After a while, she found one of the little rat crying. “I am starving!” lamented the little rat. “How is it possible? I have just given to your brother a big piece of Swiss Cheese to share!” “He did!” replied the hungry rat. “He said: We share; for me the cheese and for you the holes!”

Morale: How many times did we give the holes to others?

We perceive according to our mind!

“What is important to understand is that the view you have of yourself and the view you have of your environment are based on your own mind; they are the projection of your mind and that is why they are not reality.” Lama Yeshe

When you are in love, everything is wonderful, beautiful, great, positive... You cannot see anything wrong in your partner. Then, after some time, fighting and conflicts start. What happened? Did the partner change? Or did your mind change?

“They like rotted food! What about you, dear students?”

“Beauty and ugliness, goodness and badness are not inside the people or objects. Enemies and friends, presidents and beggars, names and qualities... all come from our mind! Change the mind to change the world”.

Poor Mowgli, he does not have Nano car, mobile and computer. How can he be happy?

Is he unhappy? Is he depressed? Does he feel alone? Does he need counselling?

Mowgli is back to his forest.

Poor Mowgli, his fantastic world is no more! Can we help him? How can we help him? Look for the answer not inside the books, but inside your heart!

The Wise says: “Beauty and ugliness, goodness and badness, enemies and friends, presidents and beggars... all come from our mind! Change the mind to change the world!”

Mowli and the modern student

“Mowli, do you know the speed of light?” asked a Saint John School’s student to Mowli: a projection of his fantasy.

“No! Then?”, replied the projected Mowli.

“Poor Mowli, your GK is very poor! If you make exams at my school, you would be lost!”

“Do you know the speed of the panther when she is going to attack someone? Do you know how to climb a tree to save yourself? ”

“No!”

“Poor friend, if you make exams in the forest, your life will be lost!”

The wise Baloo listened to the conversation.

“May I say something?” he asks to the writer of this short story.

“Of course! You are welcome!” replies the writer.

“I would suggest to the two kids of the story to share their knowledge!”

“Wonderful idea!” exclaimed Mowli. “You modern friend teach me about the speed of light and I teach you about the speed of Baghera and how to climb a tree to save yourself from wild animals’ attack. In this way, both of us will survive: you in the jungle of animals and I in the jungle of your school!”
